17.2 Bachelor of Science (Education) – Programme Structure

Students pursuing a degree in Bachelor of Science (Education) select two teaching subjects out of seven subjects: Biology, Chemistry, Geography, Economics, Mathematics, Computer Science and Physics. They also have to take university-wide courses and educational courses along with Bachelor of Arts (Education). Students taking Geography and Economics as one of their teaching subjects have to get along in their classroom studying Geography and Economics courses with students pursuing Bachelor of Arts (Education). For a student to graduate in this programme, he/she should accumulate at least 360 credits. The following tables show the programme structure and courses offered, respectively.

18.12 Ordinary Diploma in Law and Shariah

The Ordinary Diploma in Law and Shariah is a three-year, full-time programme designed to provide students with a solid foundation in both Common Law and Islamic Law, reflecting the dual legal system practised in Tanzania. The programme equips students with essential legal knowledge, practical skills, and ethical values necessary for effective participation in legal and quasi-legal settings, with emphasis on legal methods, criminal and civil law, constitutional and administrative law, Islamic jurisprudence, family law, and Islamic finance. Through a balanced combination of classroom instruction, moot court exercises, clinical legal training, and supervised field practical training in courts, law firms, and public legal institutions, students develop competencies in legal drafting, research, advocacy, client counselling, and dispute resolution. Graduates are prepared for employment as legal assistants, court clerks, paralegals, and support staff in public and private legal institutions, as well as for progression to higher studies in law and related disciplines.
